TS Global appointed exclusive Australian distributor for new conveyor tracking range - Traksure

Australian-owned manufacturers join forces to eliminate belt misalignment and supply reliability across the mining and bulk handling sectors

Australian conveyor product specialist TS Global has been appointed the exclusive national distributor of Traksure, a new Australian-designed conveyor belt tracking range purpose-built for the demands of the local mining and bulk handling industries.

The partnership brings together two Australian-owned businesses with a shared focus on delivering high-quality, locally supported solutions to an industry where equipment reliability and supply certainty are critical operational requirements.

Traksure was established after identifying a significant gap in the Australian market for a locally owned and operated tracking solution. Conveyor belt misalignment remains one of the most common causes of unplanned downtime across the sector, leading to material spillage, belt and structural damage, increased power consumption, and escalating maintenance costs.

Traksure General Manager Tim Slattery said that while established international suppliers service this segment, Australia has consistently been treated as a secondary market.

“We understand that conveyor operators work to strict maintenance schedules, so dependable delivery is essential,” Slattery said. “We recognised a gap in the market for an Australian-owned and operated business that prioritises local industry.”

Traksure offers a streamlined product range that includes Tapered Trough Trackers, Flat Dual Return Trackers, Vee Dual Return Trackers, and Single Roll Flat Return Trackers, covering belt widths from 450mm to 3000mm across standard through to super-heavy duty applications. The product design eliminates guide rollers entirely, removing the belt edge damage risk associated with traditional tracking systems, and all rollers feature a fully sealed triple labyrinth bearing system capable of withstanding high-pressure washdowns and the most demanding site environments.

Slattery said the underlying technology has been refined over more than 40 years, with the range engineered specifically to meet the differing requirements of Australian operations -- from the extreme conditions of Pilbara iron ore mining to the strict compliance standards required for East Coast underground coal applications.

TS Global has operated as an Australian-owned business since 2007, specialising in conveyor products and polyurethane components for the materials handling and mining sectors.

TS Global General Manager Graham Holford said the Traksure partnership represents a significant addition to the company's offering.

"This is an exciting opportunity for TS Global, the leading Australian-owned manufacturer of conveyor products, to partner with a high-quality company such as Traksure" Holford said.

"The new Traksure range will deliver our clients an engineered, high performing solution for conveyor tracking and will enhance our existing and extensive range of conveyor products."

Holford said TS Global's commitment to local stockholding means customers can expect the same fast turnaround they rely on across the rest of the TS Global range. "TS Global invests heavily in stock to meet our clients' demands, and Traksure will be no different. We will carry an extensive range of standard products to ensure quick turnaround times, whilst also offering customised solutions."

With inventory held both in Australia and at the manufacturing facility, lead times are significantly shorter than those typically associated with overseas-sourced tracking equipment -- where wait times of up to 24 weeks have been common.

Slattery said TS Global's national footprint and strong industry reputation made it the natural distribution partner for Traksure's growth. "They have a proven track record in delivering high-quality, safe maintenance solutions and an established presence across Australia. We see this as a perfect fit."

The Traksure range is available now through TS Global. For product specifications and enquiries, contact TS Global at sales@tsglobal.net.au or 1300 418 298 or visit www.tsglobal.net.au.
